

Contributors

Pirjo Ahokas is Professor of Comparative Literature at the University of Turku, Finland. She began her academic career by focusing on Jewish American fiction. She is also the author of Forging a New Self, a monograph on Bernard Malamud's novels, and co-editor (with Martine Chard-Hutchinson) of Reclaiming Memory: American Representations of the Holocaust. Her subsequent research deals with works by American women authors of Chinese, African American and Native American descent. She has also concentrated on new writing by "Black" British women authors and compared their works with those by contemporary American ethnic minority women authors.

Niels Bjerre-Poulsen holds a Ph.D. in American History from University of California, Santa Barbara, and is Associate Professor at the Center for American Studies, University of Southern Denmark. He has published widely on topics related to American political culture and foreign relations. His most recent book is Vietnamkrigen, 1945-1975: En International Historie (Copenhagen: Gyldendal, 2015). Niels Bjerre-Poulsen is also a former president of NAAS, and he frequently comments on American politics in the Danish media.

Kristina Fjelkestam is Associate Professor in Comparative Literature at Linköping University. She has published extensively within the fields of literature, aesthetics and gender studies.

Benita Heiskanen, PhD, is Director of the John Morton Center for North American Studies and Docent of American Studies at the University of Turku. She is the author of The Urban Geography of Boxing: Race, Class, and Gender in the Ring (New York: Routledge, 2012; paperback 2014). Her other publications in English include journal articles in the JOMEC Journal: Media, Journalism, and Cultural Studies, European Journal of American Studies, European Journal of Cultural Studies, Diálogos Latino-americanos, Auto/Biography, and Journal of Sport History. She also writes in Finnish. Heiskanen is the co-editor with Andrae Marak of "The Border in the Classroom: Approaches to Border Studies," a thematic forum of The Middle Ground Journal: World History and Global Studies.

Hilde Løvdal Stephens holds a PhD from the University of Oslo. She works as a freelance translator and writer. Her research interests are women's history, the history of family and family values, and American evangelicalism in the U.S. and abroad. She currently works on a manuscript on James Dobson and Focus on the Family.

Leif Magne Lervik graduated with an M.A. from the University of Oslo in 1993. After several years with the Royal Norwegian Ministry of Defense, he returned to pursue a doctorate at University of Oslo. Before it was completed, however, he left for a career in the publishing industry. Today, he teaches English at Molde Upper Secondary School and is finalizing his doctorate on the culture of guns in the United States.

Tom Packer is affiliated to Oxford University where he has been a Departmental Lecturer. Previously he was a fellow at the Institute for the Study of the Americas and taught at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He obtained his doctorate from Oxford University where his thesis topic was Jesse Helms and North Carolina Politics 1972-1984.

Alf Tomas Tønnessen is Associate Professor of American civilization/English at Volda University College. He is the President of ASANOR and the author of How Two Political Entrepreneurs Helped Create the American Conservative Movement, 1973-1981: The Ideas of Richard Viguerie and Paul Weyrich (Lewiston, N.Y.: The Edwin Mellen Press, 2009). His current research deals with the Republican Party's rhetoric of anti-Europeanism and resistance to the redistribution of wealth.